fire events did occur in Naperville in the 19th century, prompting the establishment of an organized fire service.

In 1883, Naperville's first central fire station was constructed on West Jefferson Street in downtown Naperville ¹. The department has since grown to protect nearly 150,000 people with 10 fire stations as of 2024 ¹.

While specific wildfire data for Naperville is not available, broader studies of wildfire trends in western North America show that fire activity is closely linked to climate conditions. Warmer and drier conditions tend to increase fire activity ⁴. Recent years have seen an increase in fire activity linked to global warming, with extreme fire seasons becoming more common ⁴.

To gain a more comprehensive understanding of long-term fire history in the region, further research would be needed, potentially including analysis of sedimentary charcoal records or tree-ring fire scar data, which can provide insights into fire regimes over centuries or millennia ^{6 8}.
